Historical Note

The House of Providence was founded on Adams Avenue in Detroit, Michigan on August 14, 1869 by Sister De Sales Tayler, a Daughter of Charity and administrator at St. Mary's Hospital. The hospital was founded as a home for unmarried mothers and children at the request of Bishop Peter Paul Lefevre. With donations from others, the hospital was able to purchase a location on Fourteenth Avenue. The hospital moved again in 1876 to the corner of Elizabeth and St. Antoine Streets and again in 1909 to West Grand Boulevard with the donation of Henry Blackwell and William Partridge. This move established the House of Providence as a maternity hospital. In 1910, the Hospital opened a school of nursing, and, due to their location on an entire city block, began to expand with a second building in 1919, which included a chapel and an auditorium. Further expansions occurred in 1921 and 1926. In 1929, the orphan asylum was closed and the children moved to Sarah Fisher Home for Children, which was also operated by the Daughters of Charity in Detroit.

In 1950, a new operating room was built with a complete X-ray department, and in 1951, the unmarried mothers department incorporated as a separate institution known as Marillac Villa. With the continuing population increase in Detroit, a citizen's group, the Greater Detroit Area Hospital Council, began to discuss with the Daughters of Charity the most effective way to provide medical care to the entire Southeast Michigan region. Providence Hospital moved to an acquired tract of land in Southfield, Michigan. The new hospital was dedicated in Southfield in March 1965 to serve the northern suburbs of Metropolitan Detroit. In 1975, the School of Nursing was closed with shifts in the field of nursing education. In 1978, Providence Hospital Family Health Center of South Lyon opened as a satellite primary care clinic, and in 1980, a second clinic opened as the Providence Hospital Novi Center at Ten Mile and Haggerty Roads.

In the late 20th and early 21st century, the hospital became known as a center of cancer research through the Michael and Rose Assarian Cancer Center, in partnership with the University of Michigan Health System. However, with mounting financial pressures, Providence Health System merged with St. John Health System on November 1, 1999 as part of the creation of Ascension Healthcare, a national Catholic health network. In 2020, Providence operates under the name Ascension Providence as part of this network.

Scope and Contents

The collection contains materials related to the operation and history of Providence Hospital, formerly known as the House of Providence, in Detroit and Southfield, MI, by the Daughters of Charity. This includes policies and procedures; administrative documents; reports; plans; property and legal documents; construction projects; histories and correspondence; financial documents; board and other committee and department minutes; contracts; bequests; legal cases; and audio-visual materials related to various events, individuals, sites, and departments. The collection also contains yearbooks, news releases, various newsletters of the hospital in their entirety from 1945-2006, brochures, newspaper clippings, events and celebrations, scrapbooks, limited personnel information, and small artifacts. It contains information about mergers and separations with various other missions of the Daughters of Charity in the Detroit Metropolitan Area as well as the Hospital's association with Ascension Health Network. There is also information related to the local community of the Daughters of Charity.

The collection also contains documents related to the Providence Hospital School of Nursing, operating both in conjunction with the hospital as an independent entity and in partnership with Oakland University and the University of Michigan. This portion of the collection contains class rosters, administrative reports, newspaper clippings, press releases, newsletters, faculty and student guides, and scrapbooks, as well as information on the Alumnae Association and closure of the School.
