Historical Note

St. Joseph School was the parochial school of St. Joseph Parish in East St. Louis, run by the Diocese of Belleville. The parish and School were both founded in 1902 and operated until 1906. Until the 1960s, the community was predominantly composed of Irish, German, Polish and Lithuanian immigrants and their families. Beginning in the 1960s, the parish became a largely African-American Catholic congregation, primarily serving converts. The Daughters of Charity were a part of the staff at the school from 1985 to 1989. After parish re-consolidation, the school closed in 2006.
